Mike Lindell Found Innocent—But Ordered to Pay Millions:

“This Isn’t Justice. It’s Lawfare.”

Final Fundraising Push: $400,000 Needed to Appeal Unjust Ruling

Denver, CO — After years of relentless lawfare, Mike Lindell has emerged vindicated in federal court—cleared of malice, with no punitive damages and no liability for MyPillow. Yet despite the jury rejecting the heart of Eric Coomer’s defamation case, Lindell was still ordered to pay $2.3 million.

Let that sink in: Mike was found not guilty of malice, but is still being forced to pay millions—for speaking out and defending our elections.

“This ruling is proof that truth isn’t enough in today’s corrupted legal landscape,” said a spokesperson for the Lindell Legal Defense Fund. “They couldn’t prove Mike acted with malice. They couldn’t show harm by MyPillow. But they’re still trying to destroy him financially. It’s disgraceful—and it must be appealed.”

Mike Lindell has sacrificed everything for this country—his fortune, his business relationships, and years of his life—because he refused to stay silent. While media giants caved and paid hush money in backroom settlements, Mike stood alone, demanded a jury trial, and walked away morally and legally vindicated.

The fight isn’t over. Now, it’s time to appeal this outrageous decision—and we need your help.

Visit mypillowtrial.com to donate now.

To launch a full appeal and keep Mike in the fight, we must raise $400,000 in the next two weeks. Every dollar helps us push back against the political machine weaponizing our courts to silence truth-tellers.

“This case was never just about me,” Mike said. “It’s about the right of every American to speak freely, ask questions, and challenge a system that’s gone off the rails. We won a major battle—but now they’re trying to punish me anyway.”

It’s time to stand with Mike one more time. He fought for us—now we fight for him!
