Mike Lindell Vindicated in Landmark Defamation Trial

MyPillow is exonerated and will Pay $0.00

Denver, CO — In a defiant stand for the First Amendment, Mike Lindell, CEO of MyPillow, has emerged largely victorious in a closely watched defamation trial brought by former Dominion Voting Systems executive Eric Coomer. While corporate media giants like Fox News surrendered under pressure—paying $787.5 million to Dominion to avoid a courtroom showdown—Lindell took the fight all the way to a jury trial and was overwhelmingly cleared of wrongdoing.

“this was huge victory for our country! MyPillow was sued for NO reason and they won! The media should wake up and stop backing companies that rhyme with Dominion,” said Mike Lindell. “Smartmatic, ES&S and start looking at the companies they are attacking like MyPillow. MyPillow is innocent now!” said a very triumphant Lindell.

Victory Checklist:

- MyPillow: Fully exonerated
- Mike Lindell: Cleared of malice, no punitive damages, no conspiracy
- Lindell defended free speech—and won.

Coomer sought over $60million in damages. The jury awarded him a total of less than 5% (to be appealed!)—and nothing from MyPillow. They also rejected claims of malice and punitive intent, confirming that Lindell was driven not by hatred—but by conviction.

Mike Lindell stood alone—refusing to pay hush money and refusing to apologize for voicing concerns shared by millions of Americans.

Instead of bowing, Lindell walked into a courtroom, testified for eight consecutive days, and emerged with no punitive judgment, no finding of malice, and zero liability for MyPillow. That is a decisive win for Lindell—and a resounding affirmation that free citizens have a right to say what they believe is true.

“It’s time to get MyPillow back into the box stores and all those that cancelled us, shopping channels and everything else the media attacked which was MyPillow for four years. Are they going to apologize to MyPillow and start buying MyPillows?” said Lindell in a late afternoon press conference.

Lawfare Defeated, Free Speech Defended

“Mike Lindell has shown that you can speak your mind—yes, even politically—and stand by your beliefs without being destroyed,” said one legal observer. “That’s the essence of the First Amendment.”

The trial exposed how “The Club”—Coomer’s own term for the elite circle of government and election officials—operates to protect itself while demonizing dissenters. In a powerful closing, attorney Jennifer DeMaster stated:

“The plaintiff can have free speech—but he can’t,” pointing at Lindell.

- This case wasn’t just about Lindell—it was about whether every American still has the right to speak what they believe. And the jury’s answer affirmed that yes, we do have the right to question elections.

Victory Checklist

- MyPillow: Fully exonerated
- Mike Lindell: Cleared of malice, no punitive damages, no conspiracy
- Lindell defended free speech—and won.

Final Word:

Mike Lindell stood up to Dominion Voting Systems and came out in a victory for courage and commitment to truth and to repairing the damaged reputation of his USA company.

And while we do not agree that the plaintiff was entitled to any award whatsoever, and his motivations were to harm Mike Lindell, this was nevertheless a victory for Lindell, a victory for MyPillow, and a historic win for free speech in America.
